MARKET UPDATE

SMC Liquid index decreased by 1.86% in April. The domestic economy was conducive during the month of Hari Raya Idul Fitri. Inflation booked a lower number in April compared to the previous month due to harvesting season. PMI manufacturing was also stable in the expansion territory. The homecoming by most Indonesians went well overall during Hari Raya Idul Fitri where the government extended the holiday in order to give people more time to get together for the first time since the covid restriction was revoked. The other positive driver was the exchange rate which is stable at below Rp 15,000 per USD. Another important point in April is that more political parties announced their presidential candidacy which gives the market enough time to digest the political condition until the election in February 2024. Indonesian stocks performed well in April 2023, especially big-cap stocks. The sectors that moved positively came from the infrastructure sector like the telecommunication, energy sector, transportation sector, basic materials sector and consumer non-cyclical sector like automotive. Financial sector which used to be the main driver of indexes was quite muted in April. In general, Indonesian stocks are still relatively cheap compared to the historical valuation. Indonesian stocks can perform further once there is more certainty on US monetary policy as global investors are currently still in the shadow of risk-off. The top contributors SMC Liquid index: Gudang Garam/GGRM (+9.42%), Bumi Serpong Damai /BSDE (+8.67%), Bukit Asam/PTBA (+3.76%), Perusahaan Gas Negara/PGAS (+3.62%) and AKR Corporindo/AKRA (+4.52%), while top detractors: Surya Esa Perkasa/ESSA (-25.93%), Bank Jago/ARTO (-14.46%), Semen Indonesia/SMGR (-5.56%), Mitra Adiperkasa/MAPI (-9.27%) and XL Axiata/EXCL (-11.62%).
