MARKET UPDATE

Indonesia's headline inflation surged to 3.5% YoY in January from 2.9% in December, coming in below both house and consensus expectations but breaching Bank Indonesia's (BI) upper target band. The sharp acceleration was driven almost entirely by utility inflation, reflecting low base effects from last year's electricity tariff discount, rather than a broad-based price pressure. On a monthly basis, inflation fell 0.2% m-o-m, underscoring the largely technical nature of the spike headline. Core inflation edged up only modestly to 2.5% YoY, remaining well contained. BI kept the policy rate unchanged at 4.75%, as widely expected, extending its pause amid a continued focus on Rupiah stability. BI emphasized that recent currency weakness reflects external pressures rising geopolitical risks, elevated global yields, strong corporate FX demand, and fiscal concerns rather than domestic imbalances. In response, BI has stepped up FX intervention and signaled readiness to expand its operations if needed, while maintaining its stance on supporting monetary-easing transmission where conditions allow. In January 2026, BI middle rate was depreciated 0.02% to 16,786/USD.
